SUPPLEMENT
TO THE LONDON GAZETTE,
TUESDAY, JULY 11.

An account of the Battle fought near Aspern, on the Marchfeld, on the 21st and 22d of May, 1809, between the archduke Charles of Austria, generalissimo of the Imperial Austrian armies, and the emperor Napoleon, commander in chief of the French and allied armies.

[CONCLUDED.]

Fourth and Fifth Columns.

These were both composed of the corps of lieut. gen. prince Rosenberg on either bank of the Russbach, and directed their march from their position to the right and left of Deutsch Wagram.

The fourth proceeded through Roschdorf straight to Esslingen. Colonel Hardegg of Schwarzenberg's Hussars conducted the advanced guard.

The fifth directed its march towards the left in order to go a circuit round the little town of Enzersdorf, and drive the enemy out of the place. It was reinforced by Siptic's hussars, under the command of col. Frolich. Lieut. gen. Klenau led the advanced guard of both columns.

As this circuit round Enzersdorf obliged the fifth to describe a longer line, it was necessary for the fourth to advance rather more slowly.

Enzersdorf, however, was quickly taken possession of by a detachment of Siptic's hussars, and of the Wallachian Illyrian frontier regiment, as it was already for the greatest part evacuated by the enemy from whom no more than thirty prisoners could be taken.

Both columns now received orders to advance upon Esslingen.

The fourth in close columns of battalions of Czartorisky's, archduke Louis's and Coburg, who were twice successively attacked by upwards of 2000 of the enemy's heavy cavalry; but these were each time put to flight by our brave infantry with considerable loss.

Of the fifth column, two battalions of Chastelar's advanced directly upon Esslingen, while two battalions of Bellegarde's were ordered to penetrate the left bank of the village, and the small contiguous wood. Two battalions of Hiller's and Sztyr's, besides the archduke Ferdinand's and Siptic's regiments of hussars, and two divisions of Rosenberg's light horse, were in the plain in readiness to support them.

These combined attacks were made twice successively, with uncommon intrepidity; the enemy's troops were repulsed on every point, and driven into the village of Esslingen, which had been set on fire. But as the enemy's army was drawn up in several lines between Esslingen and Aspern, and met each new attack with fresh reinforcements, because the safety of his retreat depended on the possession of this bridge, our troops were obliged to abandon it at the approach of night, and to wait, under arms, the arrival of morning.

The reserve corps of cavalry had marched in two columns, under the command of General Prince of Lichtenstein, and advanced upon the New Inn between Raschdorf and Brietenlee. General Count Wartenleben with Blankenstein's hussars, conducted the advanced guard.

No sooner did the enemy perceive the general advance of the army, than he placed the bulk of his cavalry, supported by some battalions of infantry, in order of battle between Esslingen and Aspern, and commenced a brisk cannonade upon the columns of Austrian cavalry as they advanced.

Prince Lichtenstein directed his columns to march forward in two lines, on which the enemy detached four or five thousand cavalry from his position to the right by way of Esslingen, and excited some apprehension that he would impede the progress of the fourth column or even break through it. The Prince therefore ordered 4 regiments to the left, and kept the second column formed in two lines, till he was convinced that the fourth column would not meet with any impediment to its march.

During this movement the remainder of the enemy's cavalry also advanced with the greatest confidence, towards the right wing of the Austrian. They were received with a firmness which they probably did not expect. The intrepidity of the cavalry which had marched up, particularly Maurice Lichtenstein's regiment, and the archduke Francis's cuirassiers, the former headed by its gallant colonel, Roussel, frustrated the repeated assaults of the enemy, by counter-attacks, by which they at length put a stop to his impetuous advance and completely repulsed him with considerable loss. In these conflicts, the French general of division Durness, equestrian to the emperor, was taken prisoner a few paces from him, as was also general Foulcr, equestrian to the emperor after having been slightly wounded. Notwithstanding the fire of musketry which now ensued, the prince ordered a general advance, by which the enemy was straightened in the alignment between Esslingen and Aspern, but on account of the flanking fire at Esslingen could not be pursued any further. The fire of his guns was answered with spirit by the horse-artillery. About seven in the evening three thousand horse were again detached towards the point of union between the cavalry of the corps of reserve and the left wing of prince Hohenzollern, and fell en masse upon the brigades of cuirassiers of generals Kroyher, Klary and Siegenthal; but by the steady intrepidity of the Blankenstein's and Riesch's regiments, who with the utmost gallantry made a sudden attack on their flanks, his cavalry was again repulsed, and part of it, which had fallen upon some regiments of the new raised levies, placed in the third line, was cut off, and there taken.

Meanwhile night came on, and it was passed by the prince in the best state of preparation on the ground which he had gained from the enemy.

For the first time, Napoleon had sustained a defeat in Germany. From this moment he was reduced to the rank of bold and successful generals, who, like himself, after a long service of destructive achievements, experienced the vicissitudes of fortune. The charm of his invincibility was dissolved. No longer the spoiled child of fortune, by posterity he will be characterised as the sport of the fickle goddess. New hopes begin to animate the oppressed nations. To the Austrian army the 21st of May was a grand and glorious epoch, that must inspire it with a consciousness of its strength and a confidence in its energies. Overwhelmed by our irresistible infantry, its proud opponents were extended in the dust, and the presence of their hitherto unconquered emperor was no longer capable of snatching from the heroes of Austria the laurels which they had acquired.

Napoleon's glory was obviously at stake. New efforts were to be expected on the following day; but he was also obliged to fight for his existence. By means of fire ships sent down the Danube, the archduke had caused the enemy's bridge on the Lobau to be broken down, and its repairs would take up several hours. Meanwhile Napoleon had already, in the evening, been joined by the corps of gen. Oudinot; and all the disposable troops followed from Vienna, and the Upper Danube, and were transported across the river in vessels as fast as they arrived. The Archduke on his part, ordered the grenadier corps which had not had any share in the first engagement, to advance from its position near Gerasdorf to Brietenlee; and the short night was scarcely sufficient to complete the respective preparations for the commencement of a second tragedy.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 8.

Of the deserters from L'Africaine British frigate, several were apprehended in this city by Mr. Sheriff Hunter, and committed to prison. This morning they were however discharged by Judge Scott, on the ground of their being detained without any legal commitment. A very large concourse of people assembled to await the event.

The Second Grand Battle on the Danube.

We have made a great effort to translate and publish the official bulletin of the battle of Wagram, which was fought in sight of Vienna. The articles published in the democratic papers of this morning are mere aggravated rumors; all their dates being superseded by the bulletin, except the armistice, which is not contained in our file and which we have therefore copied from the American of this morning.

We shall give further translations on Monday.

As the armistice was made several days after the battle, it is evident that it was not immediately compelled by it; and as the terms of it exclude the French from all Hungary, Moravia and Bohemia, the strength of the Austrian monarch is far from being exhausted. Of the 200,000 men, with which the archduke commenced the conflict the French do not pretend that he lost more than 60,000, and it is probable that the number is vastly less. Hence by their own statements he must have 140,000 men left. But the attack having been made by the French—and the bulletin plainly evincing, that it was a drawn battle, we make no doubt, that the French loss has been tremendous.

The affairs of Europe are not therefore settled: and it is certain that the soil of Germany will drink up much more blood of her sons before they will become the irredeemable slaves of the Corsican.

Latest from the European Continent.

We have hastily made the following translation from the Hamburg Correspondent of the 21st July, with which we have been favored by a gentleman of this city.

MUNICH, July 12.

Twenty-fifth Bulletin of the Army.
WOLKERSDORFF, 8th July.
Passage of the arm of the Danube to the Land of Lobau.

On the 4th at 10 in the evening general Oudinot embarked 1500 of general Courroux's voltigeurs on the great arm of the Danube. Colonel Baste with 10 gun boats carried them out and landed them beyond the confluence of the lesser arm of the island of Lobau in the Danube. The batteries of the enemy were soon silenced and he was pursued from the wood to the village of Muhiet.

At 11 o'clock in the evening the batteries planted against Enzersdorf received orders to begin to fire. The howitzers reduced this unfortunate small city to ashes, and in less than half an hour the enemy's batteries were silenced.

At 2 o'clock after midnight, the army had [the figure is illegible] bridges, and the left wing debouched, under the protection of the batteries 1500 toises below Enzersdorf, and at the right at Wittau. The corps of the duke of Rivoli (Massena) composed the right wing, that of Oudinot the centre, and Auerstadt's (Davoust) the left wing. The corps of the duke of Ponte Corvo (Bernadotte) of the vice roy, and of Ragusa (Marmont) the guard and the cuirassiers composed the 2d line and the reserve. The great darkness, a heavy storm and a rain which poured into the streams rendered this night as dreadful, as it was favorable to the French army, and glorious as it was to eventuate.

On the 5th, at the earliest dawn, every man perceived the emperor's plan, who was now with his army in order of battle at the furthest extremity of the enemy's left wing, had turned all his intrenchments, rendered all his works useless, and had compelled the Austrians to move out of their posts and to give him battle upon ground which was advantageous. This great problem was accomplished, and without passing the Danube any where else, without even any support from the works, the enemy was obliged to fight three quarters of a league from his redoubt. Now was anticipated the greatest and most happy result.

At 8 in the morning, the batteries, which played upon Enzersdorf, had produced such an effect that the enemy was fain to take possession of it with 4 battalions. The duke of Rivoli ordered his first aide-de-camp St. Groix to march against it, of which he possessed himself without much opposition and captured every thing in it.

Count Oudinot surrounded the fort of Sachsengang, which the enemy had abandoned, compelled 900 men which defended it to surrender and took 12 pieces of cannon. Now the emperor ordered his whole army to display upon the immense plain of Wagram.

Meanwhile, the enemy who had committed an error in his plans, recovered from some advantages on the new field of battle. For this purpose he detached many corps of infantry, a great number of artillery, all his cavalry, as well of the line as of the vics, in order it possible to oust the right wing of the French army. Where he took possession of the village of Riedsdorf. The emperor ordered count Oudinot to take this village, and ordered the duke of Auersstadt to pass on the right and direct himself against the head-quarters of the archduke Charles, as he was coming to march from the right to the left. From noon till nine o'clock in the evening we manoeuvred in this vast plain. We all the villages, and as we approached the heights of their entrenched positions, the duke of Rivoli caused them to be taken possession of without opposition. In manner we got into our power, the village of Esslingen and Gross Aspern, and the 40 days work of the enemy was rendered totally useless to him. At Riedsdorf, the duke of Ponte Corvo caused to be taken and taken, he met with some opposition. The enemy was every where flight and annihilated by the superior our fire. The immense field of battle remained covered with his fragments.

BATTLE OF WAGRAM.

Greatly dismayed by the progress of the French army, and its great results, he ordered almost without an effort, the enemy all his troops to march, and in the evening took the following position: right wing extended from Stadlau to Gerasdorf, his centre from Gerasdorf to Wagram, and his left wing from Wagram to Neustedel. The left wing of the army was at Great Aspern, its centre at Raschdorf, and its right at Glitz. In this order night came on, and we prepared for a great battle the next morning. The position of the enemy was receding throughout, in order to hinder him from any system, after we should take possession of the village of Wagram in the night, that case his line already extended, and was surprised by a change of circumstances must have suffered the different corps mixed without order or object, and the fair would soon be terminated without serious conflict. Wagram was attacked by troops took the village; but a Saxon column and a French column in the dark took other for enemies, and the operation carried.

Already we were preparing for the battle of Wagram. It appears that the divisions of the French and Austrian armies were opposed to each other. The emperor employed the whole army to draw together his force into the place where he was personally within cannon of Wagram. For this purpose the duke of Rivoli marched to the left of Aspern, and left a single division at Aspern, who had orders in case of necessity to retreat to the island of Lobau. The duke of Auersstadt had orders to advance beyond the village of Grossholz, in order to approach the centre. The Austrian general in the time weakened his centre in order to copy and strengthen his wings, to which gave additional extent.

On the 6th at day break the duke of Ponte Corvo occupied the left wing, his second line was the duke of Rivoli. The vice king closed in the centre, the corps of Count Oudinot, that of the duke of Ragusa, the corps of the imperial guard, and the division of cuirassiers, edged 7 or 8 lines. The duke of Auersstadt marched from the right wing to reach the centre. The enemy on the other hand, the corps of Bellegarde at Raschdorf; the corps Colluth, Lichtenstein and Muller united with the right in the position of Wagram, where the left wing of Hohenzollern was, and at the left wing at Neustedel, where the corps of Rosenberg and Auerberg debouched by a curved movement at the early fell upon each other and gave the battle.

The Emperor equally commenced the period, ordered the duke of Auersstadt reinforced by the division of Cuirassiers the due of Padua, and the corps of the duke of Ragusa, to be taken in flank by a battery of pieces of the division of gen. count Noy. In less than three quarters of an hour the fine corps of Auerstadt had the corps of Rosenberg and pursued beyond Neustedel, and did it great.

Meanwhile the cannonade became general through the whole line, and the disposition of the enemy disclosed itself every moment. His whole left wing was lined with artillery. It might be said that the Austrian general prepared not to obtain a victory, but that he had in view only the means of taking advantage of it. This disposition seemed so unskillful, that a defeat was anticipated, and the emperor waited some time before he ordered the small disposition which was necessary to frustrate that of the enemy and to render it a misfortune to him.

He ordered the duke of Rivoli to attack a village which the enemy occupied, and by which the centre of the army was a little galled. He ordered the duke of Auerstadt to take the position of Neustedel and thence to advance to Wagram, and ordered the duke of Ragusa and general Macdonald to form in columns to seize upon Wagram the moment the duke of Auerstadt debouched.

After these occurrences we were informed that the enemy made a desperate assault upon the village which the duke of Rivoli had taken; our left wing was surrounded at 8000 toises; a violent cannonade was already heard at Gross Aspern, and the whole interval between Gross Aspern and Wagram was occupied by an immense line of artillery. No doubt was left about it.

The emperor in this situation ordered general Macdonald to form the divisions of Broussier and Lamarque into columns for the attack. He ordered them to be supported by the divisions of gen. Nansouty, the horse-guards and forty detachments of different corps. Gen. Count Lauriston marched at the head of this battery of 100 pieces of artillery against the enemy, approached him without firing till he came within half cannon shot and then commenced an astonishing fire, whereby slaughter and death were carried into the enemy's ranks. The gen. of division, Reille, supported with the brigade of fusiliers and tirailleurs the guard of gen. Macdonald. The guard altered its front to render the attack infallible. In a moment the centre of the enemy lost a league of ground. His astonished wing marked the danger of the situation in which it was and in great haste moved back. Now the duke of Rivoli attacked him during the flight of the centre and the movement forced the right wing. Neustedel was taken from his left wing, by the duke of Auerstadt, who ascended the hill and marched against Wagram, attacked and surrounded it. The divisions of Broussier and Gabin covered themselves with glory.

It was now ten o'clock in the morning and intelligent men saw that the day was decided, and that victory was on our side.

At noon, count Oudinot marched against Wagram, to support the attack of the duke of Auerstadt. He succeeded, and he got possession of this important station. From 10 o'clock the enemy thought of nothing but his retreat. Since noon, this was plainly going on and in disorder, and long before night came on the enemy was out of sight. Our left wing stood at Jetelsee and at Ebersdorf, our centre near Ebersdorf, and the cavalry of our right wing was extended, their posts at Schoenkirchen.

On the 7th at day break the army was in motion, and marched against Korneuburg and Walkersdorf, and took post at Nicholsburg. The enemy cut off from Hungary and Mahren found itself on the side of Bohemia driven into a straight.

Such is the representation of the battle of Wagram, the distinguished and ever glorious battle, where from 3 to 400,000 men with from 12 to 1500 cannon, fought for a great interest, on a field which by the enemy was studied and fortified for several months. Ten standards, 40 cannon, 20,000 prisoners, among whom are from 3 to 400 officers, and among whom are a considerable number of generals, colonels & majors, are the trophies of this victory. The fields of battle are covered with dead bodies, among whom were found the bodies of several generals, and among the rest that of Mr. NORMAN, a Frenchman and a traitor to his country, who prostituted his talents against it. All the wounded of the enemy have fallen into our hands. Those whom he was able to carry off at the beginning of the battle, were found in the environs of the villages. We may compute that the result of this battle cost the Austrian army in all about 60,000 men, our loss is estimated at 1500 dead and 3 or 4000 wounded.

At the moment when the duke of Istria was ordering the attack of the cavalry, his horse was killed by a cannon ball. The shot struck the saddle and occasioned him a slight contusion of the thigh.

The general of division Lasalle was killed by a musket ball. He was an officer of great merit and one of the best generals of light horse.

The Bavarian general Von Wrede and the generals Peray, Grenier, Vignelle, Sahuc, and DeFrance were wounded. Colonel prince Albrondini was struck on the arm by a musket ball. The majors of Chasseurs of the guard, Dansmout and Corbineau and col. St. Croix, were also wounded. The adjutant commandant Duprat was killed. The Col. of the 9th regiment of infantry of the line remained on the field of battle.

A singular circumstance in this great battle is that the columns which lay nearest to Vienna, were not 200 toises distant from it. The numerous population covered the towers, roofs and heights to witness this great spectacle.

The emperor of Austria left Walkersdorf on the 6th at 5 in the morning, and ascended a Belvedere, whence he saw the field of battle and remained till noon when he scampered away at full speed.

The French head quarters arrived on the 7th in the morning at Walkersdorf.

[In the beginning of the bulletin remarks are made on the positions of the armies. The Austrians were in all stated at 200,000 men, and their artillery at from 8 to 900 field pieces.

The annexed cases of cures performed by HAMILTON'S CELEBRATED WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

(Selected from a very numerous list.) ARE presented as indubitable proof of the excellence and safety of this valuable specific, for destroying worms in the human stomach and intestines.

From Mr. Benjamin Williams, No. 30, Baltimore street, two doors above south Gay-street.

I have a son six years of age, who for four years past, has been generally in a very unhealthy state, particularly in summer, frequently afflicted with alarming convulsion fits, the whole of his little frame wasted fast, his breath foetid, and almost constant itching at the nose was excited, with other alarming symptoms. During the course of the above period, the advice and attendance of three of the most eminent physicians in Baltimore were successively procured. Each of these gentlemen, in his turn, declared worms to be the cause of the child's disorder, and exhausted his skill in attempting to expel them. Pink root, steel filings, with a variety of other medicines, were administered without the least success. It was once pronounced impossible for the child to live many hours.

I had heard of your Worm Destroying Lo-zenges, but with many others did not think highly of so cheap a medicine, until a gentleman of my acquaintance (Mr. Wm. S. Moore, auctioneer) in whose family they had been used with good effect, advised me to make trial of them; I accordingly gave my son a dose agreeable to directions, which soon expelled eight large worms, some of them about eight inches in length; a second dose brought away four more of similar size; a third dose being administered, no worms appeared. The child recovered and now enjoys a good state of health.

BENJAMIN WILLIAMS.

AFFIDAVIT.

Michael Duffy, residing at No. 47, Walkes street, Fell's Point, in the city of Baltimore voluntarily maketh oath that the following statement is just and true:

In the beginning of May last, my three children, a boy of seven, and two girls the one five, and the other three years of age were taken very ill, nearly at the same time, of a common fever, as I then supposed; but was soon convinced the disorder was caused by worms. They were frequently troubled with convulsion fits, and violent startings in their sleep, and with almost continual vomiting and purging, particularly the youngest. I made immediate application to a physician of the first reputation, and his medicines were administered with a confidence of success, which only increased our disappointment. The children grew daily worse, and I was absolutely without hopes of their recovery. The youngest soon appeared almost devoid of animation, and scarcely an inhabitant of this world. In this distressing moment I was told that Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges had performed many cures in cases equally desperate. I immediately purchased a box, and gave each of them a dose, which in a few hours produced the most desirable effects. The eldest voided a great number of very large worms, and the second thousands of small ones, many of them not a quarter of an inch—in the youngest they seemed to be consumed, and had the appearance of skin and slimy matter. I repeated the dose agreeable to the paper of directions, and they all speedily recovered a good state of health, which they still enjoy, though 5 months have nearly elapsed, since they were on the borders of the grave, and the death of the whole seemed to be inevitable.

Sworn before me, this 26th day of September, 1799.

J. SMITH.
Philadelphia, August 5, 1806.

TO H. LEE.
Some time last spring I was afflicted with loss of appetite, giddiness in the head, fever, and great debility, so that I could scarcely walk. In this distressing situation I took many things, but without benefit. An acquaintance in the country sent to me to prepare a box of Hamilton's Lozenges. Curiosity prompted me to read the directions, where I found my complaint exactly described by the doctor. I immediately sent for another box of the Lozenges, and took one dose, which brought away a large quantity of worms, and I felt greatly relieved. Encouraged by this, I took another dose, which was attended with the happiest effects, as it relieved me entirely, and am now in a better state of health than for a considerable time past. I have since given them to my children, and can speak from experience, that they are a most valuable medicine, and am happy to add my testimony to numberless others of their efficacy.

SARAH JOHNSON,
No. 140, north Second Street.
Among the symptoms attending Worms are, agreeable breath, especially in the morn-—bad and corrupted gums—itching in the nose and about the seat—convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech—irregular appetite, sometime loathing food and sometimes voracious—purging, with slimy and foetid stools—vomiting—large and hard belly—pains and sickness at the stomach—pains in the head and thighs, with lowness of spirits—slow fever, with small and irregular pulse—a dry cough—excessive thirst—sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

Prevention better than Cure.

In cases of head ache, foul stomach, and for removing superfluous bile, perhaps no remedy has been discovered superior to LEE'S HAHN'S ANTIBILIOUS PILLS, Which for 10 years past have been attended with the greatest success. The testimony of many respectable persons in our southern sea ports has been adduced who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy during the prevalence of malignant fevers, has preserved their health after experiencing alarming symptoms of fever.

Certificate of Wm. Devenny.

During the last nine years I have been in the habit of using Hahn's Antibilious Pills, prepared by the late Mr. Lee, whenever cold, head ache, or costiveness have rendered medicine necessary; in these cases a single dose has uniformly removed my head ache, and has generally been found sufficient to remove every symptom of a cold, if taken on its first appearance. Induced by the benefit I have received, I have for years past recommended them to many of my friends, and I have the pleasure to inform you, they have invariably succeeded in removing the above complaints.
